

Preparation Time: 40 minutes

Many curries can be made with a large variety of ingredients. This is a simple base to get started with — all ingredients are intended to be readily available at your local grocery store.

|---|---|---|
| 1 | 2 cups chickpeas, drained, peeled, & rinsed | Apply cooking oil to sheet pan. Place chickpeas on pan and toss them around to coat in oil. Roast chickpeas in 375° oven for 12 minutes. At minute 6, remove and apply salt and pepper, rotating peas to coat again in oil, salt, and pepper. Remove and set aside when done. |
| 2 | 1 block firm tofu, pressed ¹
1 dash chili powder, or other warm spice | Cube into 1/2 inch or smaller peices and cook the tofu in oil on a medium skillet. Season with salt, pepper, and a dash of chili powder (or alternative warm spice). It will cook best when allowed to sit untended in the skillet for 5 minute increments before flipping peices. Tofu is done when it has a golden brown crust on each side. Remove from skillet and set aside when done. |
| 3 | 1-2 cups chopped vegetables ²
2 cloves garlic, chopped or minced ³
1 Tbsp curry powder
1/2 tsp chili powder
1/4 tsp cumin | Sautee vegetables in skillet when tofu is done cooking at medium heat, with some additional oil or reserved oil from previous cook. Once vegetables begin to soften you can add salt and pepper. Additionally, apply more heat and leave vegetables undisturbed to add a slight char (this improves their flavor). Add garlic, stir. Create a gap in the vegetables and add the curry powder, chili powder, and cumin. Allow these to “bloom” for a minute before stirring into the vegetables. |
| 4 | 1 cup milk
2 Tbsp butter
2 Tbsp flour | Add butter to skillet with vegetables. Allow butter to melt and foam. Reduce heat to medium low. Once butter melts and foaming resides, add flour and stir. The vegetables and flour will become clumpy, this is fine. Once flour is coat and combined with melted butter, begin to add milk in, slowly. Stir a small amount of milk in and stir until it is gone. Repeat this, adding a small amount and stiring until you have the start of a base (a roux). You will begin to see a smooth white sauce develop. Once you’ve added half the milk and have a sauce started you can dump the rest. Allow the sauce to thicken slightly for a few minutes. |
| 5 | 1/2 cup tomato sauce
1/4 cup sour cream
1 cup broth or stock ⁴
1 Tbsp parsley | Add tomato sauce, the amount depends on your preferences. Sour cream should be added immediately with cold or room temperature tomato sauce to prevent curdling. Sour cream can work to adjust flavor preferences, add in “dollops”, with two big ones being a 1/4 cup. Add a small amount of broth or stock and stir all ingredients into sauce. Return tofu (or prepared meat) and chickpeas to skillet. Stir. As ingredients warm and thicken you can add stock or both to attain a desired consistency. Add parsley. |

- For serving atop rice: looser is nice to create stew-like dish. Additionally, add extra salt and pepper to account for unsalted rice.
- For serving with naan: a thicker consistency might be beneficial. Again, attend to seasoning finishes to match provided medium.

Notes

² Suggestions for vegetables: onions, green bell peppers, red bell peppers, and carrots. Additional options can include nearly any vegetables that need to be eaten.

³ Substitute: clove garlic with garlic powder. Use two to three tsp., and add when returning tofu and chickpeas to curry.

⁴chicken, beef, or vegetable are all fine
